By NATHANIEL AMES.

WE, tho' from Heav'n remote, to Heav'n will move
With ſtrength of Mind, and tread th' Abyſs above;
And penetrate, with an interior light,
Thoſe upper Depths, which Nature hid from ſight.
Pleas'd we will be to walk along the Sphere
Of ſhining Stars, and travel with the Year;
To leave this heavy Earth, and ſcale the height
Of Atlas, who ſupports the heav'nly Weight;
To look from upper Light, and thence ſurvey
Miſtaken Mortals wand'ring from the way.

BOSTON:

Printed and ſold by W. M'ALPINE and J. FLEEMING in Marlborough-ſtreet.

Price, 2 s. 8 d. per Dozen. Six Coppers ſingle.

GENEROUS READER,

IT was not without great diffidence of my own ability to fill the place of my deceaſed father, who was 40 years converſant with the public in this way, and whom even envy owns to have gain'd their generous and impartial approbation; a grateful ſenſe of which, inſpiring me with the moſt refreſhing hopes of their future encouragement and protection, join'd with a reflection on the ſublimity of the employment for leiſure hours, that I was ſollicited to offer theſe firſt fruits of my labors, under my own patronage, to your candid view. And as long as I can gain the ſmiles of public favor, which is a great incitement to a noble exertion, I purpoſe to make my appearance before you annually, notwithſtanding what ſome obſcure perſons would inſinuate to the contrary; who, at the expence of truth and reputation, purſue their ſordid intereſts with ſuch a monopolizing diſpoſition, as aſtoniſhes all impartial judges: for they have not only made uſe of my name, to impoſe upon the public, by prefixing it to their counterfeit Almanacks, but have even advertiſed that I was not about to publiſh an Almanack for this year, which the public knows to be falſe. I would adviſe ſuch as would buy my Almanack to be cautious leſt they be impoſed upon. Thus much I think neceſſary to inform the public with regard to this intended impoſition. Beſides what is uſual in this Almanack, you have the riſing, ſetting, or ſouthing, of the ſeven ſtars, ſeveral times in each month. I ſhall always endeavour to publiſh what I think will be moſt uſeful to the bulk of my readers, let individuals make what application they pleaſe; and next conſider their innocent diverſion: yet I hope I ſhall never be ſo bigotted to my own opinion as not to lay open to the conviction of any error, when it is offered in a candid manner, by arguments drawn from cool reaſon, void of paſſion and prejudice. Here I ſhould conclude, did I not ſhare in the general diſtreſs of my countrymen, and think it out of character, not to condole with them in their preſent diſtreſſed circumſtances, who not only groan, but almoſt ſink beneath a load of debt; our merchants continually breaking; no money to be had, even for the moſt valuable articles; and all threatened with ruin, without the lenity and aſſiſtance of our ſuperiors: yet ſo far from this, that we are ſhocked with a new demand, which, it is thought by many, all the current ſpecie among us is not able to ſatisfy; and after that is gone, then go houſes and lands, then liberties! and all the land that we can then get, will be only in vaſſalage to ſome haughty Lord, which Heaven avert! But this is only a conjecture of what might be, ſhould we prove very tame and eaſy at putting on the yoke. Now, on the other hand, let us conſider, the Government muſt be kept up; and that they who ſit at helm, know the exigencies of ſtate much better than we who are at a diſtance; and that we have the happineſs to be under as good a King as ever reign'd, and a very wiſe government; that they know we poſſeſs a true Britiſh ſpirit; and that when they come to know our true circumſtances, they will certainly redreſs our evils, for, as we are a member of the whole body of the ſtate, our intereſts are mutual, and we cannot think of independency. But, above all things, let us rely on the goodneſs of that Power which protected our forefathers, who ſought ſhelter in this howling wilderneſs among the ſavage beaſts, from more ſavage men; that they might quietly worſhip HIM, who has hitherto, and as long as we do our duty, will continue to defend us from foreign and domeſtic enemies, and ſtamp with eternal infamy and diſgrace, thoſe who would oppreſs or tyrannize over us. And now, Reader, relying on a further acquaintance, wiſhing all happineſs to Britiſh America, and confuſion to its foes, I ſubſcribe myſelf your humble Servant,

NATH. AMES.

All Perſons who incline to encourage the Paper Manufacture, are requeſted to ſave their old Cotton and Linen Rags, &c. for which they may have a good Price at the Paper Mill at Milton.

COLUMBIAN Genius hear our pray'r:
O! let us all with luſtre riſe
Beneath thy tutelary care;
Retain our dear bought liberties;
Let not the voice of native freedom ſound
Alone in realms which Albion's ſhores ſurround.

There will be four Eclipſes this Year.

THE firſt of the SUN, February 9th, at 7 h. 13 m. 23 ſ. Morning, inviſible in North America; but in South America, and at the Cape of Good Hope, the Sun will be two thirds eclipſed.

Second of the MOON, February 24th, at 3 h. 6 m. Afternoon, inviſible.

Third of the SUN, Auguſt 5th, viſible.

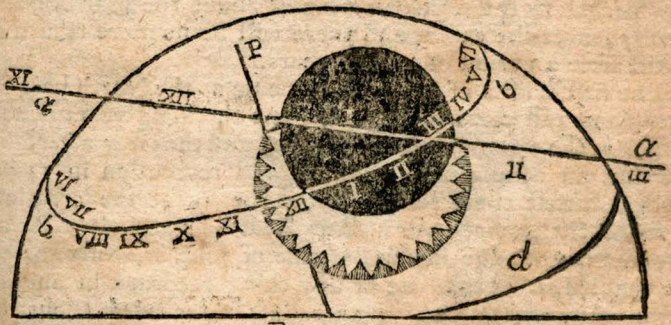
REPRESENTATION of the above ECLIPSE.



ECLIPTIC.

The above Type ſhews the exact poſition of the Sun, Moon and Earth, at the middle of the eclipſe. The large ſemicircle repreſents one half of that part of the Earth which is then illuminated by the Sun; a the path of the moon in the eliptic, or oval curve line b b, ſhews the path that Boſton would ſeem to deſcribe on the Earth's ſurface, if viewed from the Sun, and its place at the reſpective hours marked thereon; P the north pole; d the equator, or equinoctial line; the ſmall black circle repreſents the moon, or the extent of its ſhadow on the earth's ſurface; the other circle is that part of the Sun, that may be ſeen at the middle of the eclipſe, the reſt being hid by the Moon.

This eclipſe, after traverſing the voids of ſpace from the creation, at last began to touch upon the unknown parts near the south pole, about 88 years after the conquest. In the year 1546, the 17th of June, it began to touch New-England: And in 1622, it first touched the southern parts of Old-England, the 30th of April, about 2 in the Afternoon; It's central appearance rising in the American south sea, traversing Peru and the Amazon country, thro' the Atlantic Ocean into Africa, and setting in Æthiopia near the Red Sea. In 1676, on the first of June, it was almost central to us at Sun rise; and at Sun setting in the gulf of Cochinchina: In 1694 visible in the afternoon: In 1748, July 25th, it was nearly central at Newfoundland, just after Sun rise. The next period is the present eclipse. Again, in 1820 Sept. 7th, this eclipse will return very large at London. It will be visible again in 1838 at London, Sept. 18th; it will also be visible here, a small quantity eclipsed: but it wears off every period to the northward; and about the year 2090, it wholly leaves the earth, and there will be no more return of it, till after a period of 10,000 years.

The first eclipse of this year came on at the North pole several thousand years ago; and, some thousand years hence, will leave the earth at the South pole; and thus it is ascertained, that an eclipse finishes one grand revolution in 11683 years; so that those eclipses which began at the creation, have but little more than half finished their periods. By an extensive knowledge in this doctrine of eclipses, Astronomers are enabled to fix the date of any thing recorded in ancient history very exactly, where an eclipse is recorded about the same time: thus the vulgar year of Christ's birth is found to be erroneous; and what we now write or call the year of our Lord 1766, is not more than 1762, as is demonstrated by the observation of an eclipse recorded by Josephus, which cannot change, tho' the calculations from our present tables do not exactly agree with very ancient observations, which, according to the opinion of all modern Astronomers, is owing to the Moon's finishing her periods now in less time than formerly, and that she is continually approaching nearer and nearer the Earth, as do the rest of the planets to the Sun, their projectile force not being quite sufficient to balance the power of attraction; whence in time the present system of the world must come to an end of itself, without any interposition of its Grand Constructor, just as a clock left to itself will inevitably run down.

Fourth eclipſe of the MOON, Auguſt 20th, viſible,

The ancients believed, that all viſible eclipſes were portentuous of ſome dire event; and ſeveral treatiſes were written, to ſhew againſt what regions the malevolent effects of any particular eclipſe was aimed: and theſe writers affirm, that the effects of an eclipſe of the Sun, laſted as many years as the eclipſe laſted hours; and that of the Moon, as many months. But as futile as theſe notions may appear now-a-days, they were once of no ſmall advantage to Chriſtopher Columbus, who, in the year 1493, was driven on the iſland of Jamaica, where he was in the greateſt diſtreſs for want of proviſions, and was moreover refuſed any aſſiſtance from the inhabitants: on which he threatened them with a plague, and that in token of it there ſhould be an eclipſe; which falling on the day he had foretold, ſo terrified the barbarians, that they ſtrove who ſhould be the firſt in bringing him all ſorts of proviſions, throwing them at his feet, and imploring his forgiveneſs.
